

Theorem. The gradient of the linear function $z = px + qy + r$ is perpendicular to its contour lines. It points in the direction in which z increases most rapidly, and its length is equal to the maximum rate of increase.